Moore held a press conference on Wednesday announcing that more than 800 registered Republicans have joined his campaign as Republicans for Moore. Rep. Moore credited this support as signifying his mainstream, commonsense politics.

Penny Moeller, co-chair of Republicans for Moore, said, "I am one of many people who feels that the Republican Party has been hijacked by the far right wing of the party and no longer supports our views. ... I am supporting Dennis Moore because he is more in keeping with the values that I and many other Republicans represent."

Also speaking on behalf of Moore were Republicans Bob Meneilly, who founded the Village Presbyterian Church and co-founded the Mainstream Coalition, and Mary C. Ralstin, a member of the Republicans for Moore Steering Committee.

They voiced support for Moore's votes on environmental issues, scientific research, fiscal responsibility, national security and education.

Meneilly said he has a deep respect for Moore's perception, wisdom and general humility and he appreciates Moore's bipartisan efforts.

"I think that he represents really the mainstream attitudes and convictions of this district, ..." Meneilly said. "I'm very proud as a Republican to endorse Dennis Moore with all my mind, all my heart."

About 600 Republicans joined Republicans for Moore in 2000. That number has grown to more than 800.

"He has the good of America in his heart, and he is concerned about people's rights," Ralstin said.
